AIRPORT BOARD TO ADVERTISE FOR BIDS

Pictures Are Approved In Murder Trial

By JOSEPH BINNO
United Press International
DETROIT (UPI) — A set of 14 photographs of the body of slain auto dealer Parvin Lassiter and the scene were shown today to the jury hearing the murder trial of Lassiter's widow and her lover.

Circuit Judge Joseph G. Rashid approved introduction of the photos after clearing up a defense objection made to them Wednesday.

After the pictures were shown to the jury, State Police Detective Roy Tanner returned to the witness stand for cross-examination by the attorney for Lassiter's widow.

The 8-by-10 enlargements of the gruesome photos in court Wednesday produced another emotional outburst on the part of Mrs. Nelle Lassiter, accused of plotting her husband's slaying, and a legal objection from defense attorney Albert Sumner.

The beautiful, blonde Mrs. Lassiter, a former model, and her admitted lover Gordon Watson, are accused of first degree murder and conspiracy in the April 1959 slaying of her auto-dealer husband.

The photos showing Lassiter sprawled in a ditch after he was shot near Willow Run Airport were presented by Assistant Prosecutor (Continued on Page 3)

Mother Robin And Family Add Much To Library Week Here

There was one young mother last week who didn't mind the spotlight. In fact she even went to the trouble to raise her children right near the sidewalk so she could be where people congregated.

She stayed there in her home which had a big "picture window" and fed her three children, with people walking back and forth but never seemed to mind their presence whatever.

Folks stared and pointed, but she held her head high with her three children gathered around her and just stared back as if to say, "Well, what are you looking at?"

She may not have been the first Robin of Spring, but at least she was one of the first and she was observing Library Week in her own birdlike manner. Mother Robin built her nest in the big evergreen next to the walk that leads to the library on North Sixth street. She did not even go to the trouble to build next to the trunk, but preferred to build way out on a limb next to the walk.

The nest was in plain view and the three little Robins stuck their heads out from under their mother's wing watching the people go by as the visited the library last week.

Whether so many people made them become too worldly too soon, is not known, but at any rate they have now left the protection and security of the nest and are getting out on their own.

Don't worry though because Mrs. Robin is still watching out for them and will until they are completely independent.

Whether it was intentional or not the Robin family added much to Library Week and aroused much comment from the record throng of visitors.

MORE GROUNDBREAKING. . . . President Ralph H. Woods was at the controls of the bulldozer last week when ground was broken for the apartment building for married students. Mr. Hal Perry (center), the general contractor, and Mr. Douglas McLoney of McLoney, Tunce & Clark, appeared pleased with his dirt-moving ability.

Telescope Rides New Satellite

By ALVIN B. WEBB JR.
United Press International
CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — America today fired toward an earth orbit a satellite carrying a space telescope to study mysterious gamma rays and get a better idea of what makes the universe tick.

The 94.8-pound moonlet, to be named "Explorer XI," was carried aloft by a four-stage rocket at 9:16 a. m. (EST).

It represented the first step in a U. S. program to use orbiting observatories to study the Milky way and other star galaxies trillions of miles away.

Scientists hoped the little satellite would serve as the key to unlock some of the oldest mysteries about our universe. They were hoping to learn more about its makeup, its future and past.

Gamma radiations, space agency scientists explained, hold particular interest because they are associated with nuclear activity, which involves energetic processes unmatched anywhere in nature.

Although little is known of them, they could be the product of galaxies building up or breaking down.

The satellite, a highly advanced machine of the future, physically resembles a top-heavy steel lamp of the past. It was designed as an artificial "eye" through which scientists could look at gamma rays in space and trace them to their origin.

"We're hoping to satisfy scientific curiosity," said Dr. George Clark of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Cooper's Condition Becomes Worse

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Film star Gary Cooper's condition in his fight against "advanced cancer" has taken a turn for the worse, giving his physician and family reasons for "grave concern."

In the first official announcement Wednesday on the 59-year-old actor's illness, Dr. Rex Kanamer reported:

"In 1960 he underwent surgery for carcinoma of the colon. Several months ago, the malignancy was discovered at multiple sites throughout the body. In the past week there has been a worsening of his general condition and there is reason for grave concern."

Cooper's spirits were lifted Wednesday when he received a personal message from Queen Elizabeth offering her best wishes. President Kennedy talked to him on the phone last week.

The queen's message was delivered to Cooper's home by the British consul in Los Angeles. The queen said she had learned "with great regret" of his illness and sent her "best wishes."

Construction Will Begin This Summer On Modern Facility

The Murray Airport Board this morning approved all the plans and specifications on the proposed city-county airport and arrived at the decision to advertise for construction bids. Bids will be opened on May 16 at 1:30 p. m.

Discussion was held during the meeting this morning on the prospects of constructing a paved runway, rather than the proposed sod runway.

The consensus of the board was that the paved runway would be of much greater use than the sod runway in the plans and specifications.

James Hayworth of the Clyde Williams and Associates reported to the board that a paved runway would cost approximately $24,000 more than the sod runway. Construction costs will be about $87,000 under the present plans. With the added cost construction would be about $91,000.

This would include a three inch gravel base covered with five inches of crushed limestone and topped by two inches of blacktop.

With the runway paved, the entire project will cost about $142,000.

Ed La Fontaine with the State Department of Aeronautics indicated that some more help could be expected from the state if the runway is to be paved.

The state has already pledged $25,000 and has paid to the board $22,000. The Federal Government has pledged $35,000. About $45,000 was raised locally.

Chairman Buford Hurt reported that the board now has $43,669 in money, pledges and land which would represent enough, if matched by the state, to blacktop the airport runway.

Another $18,000 from the state would assure this type construction. Mr. La Fontaine indicated that he felt that the state would supply this amount of money to the board.

The possibility of adding 500 feet more to the runway to make it 3,500 feet instead of 3,000 feet was discussed. It was thought that much of the construction cost of this extra 500 feet would be eliminated by use of city and county trucks in the hauling of gravel.

It was pointed out that 3,500 feet would fall within the airport runway length desired by most companies which own their own planes.

This length runway would also be of help to the college when it uses planes to take their teams to various points.

Present at the meeting this morning at 11:00 o'clock at the city hall was Mr. Walker of the District Highway Department office in Paducah. The state has committed itself to constructing the 2785 foot access road to the airport from the Penny Road.

Mr. Walker left the meeting (Continued on Page 3)

Vast Plot Uncovered By De Gaulle

By ANTHONY AUSTIN
United Press International
PARIS (UPI) — A vast plot in metropolitan France that was to have aided the abortive military revolt in Algiers has been uncovered in a nationwide roundup, police sources reported today.

The sources said thousands of homes throughout the country had been searched under special police powers the government now holds and by midday "hundreds" were under arrest.

The sources said that searches on Tuesday afternoon turned up vital papers that contained the names of some of the main plotters in France.

"Every time we went to arrest one of those named we found more lists of names," one source told United Press International.

By Wednesday night the number of arrests in the Paris area alone had climbed to 117. By this morning, the sources said, this figure had multiplied.

Search Generals' Homes
Many of the names were said to be those of members of pro-French Algeria organizations such as "Jeune Nation."

Among the houses searched were those of Gens. Raoul Salan, Maurice Challe and Edmond Jouhaud, three of the four generals who led the four-day Algerian uprising.

Challe was lodged in Sante prison. He was flown to France from Algeria in custody Wednesday. Government officials said his trial may start within 10 days and that the prosecution may press for the death penalty.

Salan, Jouhaud and Gen. Andre-Marie Zeller apparently still were at large.

It was possible they had taken refuge with legionnaires at Camp Zeralda, 15 miles from Algiers, or had fled to the hills to carry on guerrilla warfare against De Gaulle along with 400 paratroopers reported missing.

Troops loyal to President Charles de Gaulle surrounded the base today but did not take immediate action to move into it.

There are even more reasons for cleaning up, all of which are obvious. A clean home is a healthy home. A clean home means less chance for disastrous fires. A clean home means a more enjoyable place for the entire family and will certainly better a person's outlook on things in general.

PAUL MORGAN'S GREAT HISTORICAL NOVEL A DISTANT TRUMPET

CHAPTER 23

THREE DAYS later at sunset, Matthew Hazard, approaching Mexico, came to the execution of his orders: to find the massed Chiricahuas, to estimate their number, their temper, and the direction of their travel, to avoid a fight, and to return to Fort Delivery within six days in any case. With him was the soldier, Joe, he had chosen to accompany his mission. This was his Apache scout, Joe Dummy.

They saw a towering cloud of dust in the golden distance. Joe indicated the height of the dust cloud, and sprinkled with his fingers to indicate that the number of the distant band was great. Heading north, they could have no business but to charge. Coming cautiously in their horse's walk, Matthew and Joe discussed a plan to circle southward and under the cover of dusk to take up a training position far enough to the rear to avoid detection and yet close enough to watch until absolute darkness had fallen, and the traveling through out of Mexico.

Earth's shadow began to show on the eastern sky as the sun dropped under the west. The ground was veiled in its own colors of gold, pink and gray. A premonitory chill came into the air.

"Ay," said Joe, a sharp exclamation. He pointed and then turned his mount and slipped Matthew to make it lunge into a gallop. Matthew saw a little spark of dust detach itself from the main mass of the Indians. It stirred itself forward toward the two soldiers. Here was a clue as to the temper of the Indians, for having sighted the two cavaliers at an incredible distance, a dozen Chiricahuas were coming in pursuit.

With Joe Dummy slightly in the lead, Matthew bent over his horse's laboring neck. They rode eastward into the rapidly deepening twilight. Ahead of them the full moon began to rise, whitest silver in the amethyst blue of twilight. In the last fade of daylight behind them, they saw that their pursuers still came, and they knew they must run for cover wherever they could find it.

Joe kept the lead, for he knew where to go. They seemed, actually, to be racing the moon, for as it rose above a low mesa, it cast a long shadow to the west, and the two horsemen were riding to gain it.

The first they knew of how closely they were being overtaken was the sound of bullets and of arrows coming over them.

"All right, first!" Matthew answered, turning in his own saddle and firing his carbine at the pursuers. The aim was good, for the light was gone, and as the sunset died into darkness, all chances for marksmanship disappeared. He heard his carbine, and mixed with the shaking thunder of the earth beneath hoofs he heard the faint crack of answering shots, and again the airy exhaust of arrows stinging the air beside him.

Soon the ground lifted under them in a long slope covered with tall, dry grass. They were suddenly at the edge of the shadow, they plunged into it. Behind them the moon showed in the dry golden grass. By contrast the shadow was dense and engulfing.

Joe led the gallop in a long oblique change of direction for a quarter hour. Then Matthew heard Joe dismount and dismounted also. Leading their horses they walked far along the base of the mesa.

"What is he looking for?" asked Matthew, but with no doubts of his scout. Joe knew the whole land, not only its sweep, but also its detail. Their eyes were now able to use the shadow and Matthew saw Joe dimly crouch, then rise and beckon, and then disappear. An instant later Matthew himself came to the edge of a wide earth bunker at the foot of the mesa and went down over its edge. It was like being in a re-velment. Whatever man built, nature had somewhere built it first.

"Joe, what's that?" asked Matthew.

Joe replied with a whistle of breath to indicate agreement.

He held up some charred mesquite roots left by earlier visitors. He shut off his whistle and then let it go again, but now in a blast of breath through clenched teeth with lips slanted back like an animal in fury or pain.

"Joe, what's that?" asked Matthew.

Joe Dummy bent forward in a kind of convulsion. Matthew went to him and turned him around. He saw, in silhouette, how Joe held up an arrow.

"Where did you get that, Joe?"

For answer Joe sniffed the arrow point, then threw the arrow as far from him as he could. He then sank down to his knees into darkness and refused to speak.

"Joe, what is the matter? Where did you get that arrow? Did it strike you?" Matthew was shocked by his own words.

In the starlight, Joe finally answered. He took Matthew's hand and showed, on Matthew's own shoulder, where the arrow had struck, how it had quivered and stayed, how deeply it had bitten, how he had ridden miles with it in his flesh, and now only now, in safety, with duty done, had he pulled it out. He had smelled of the arrow's head, and the lieutenant knew what this meant? It meant death.

"Like hell!" said Matthew. "We'll do something."

He pushed Joe about to face him and tore down his shirt at the right shoulder. Lighting and shielding a phosphorus match, Matthew looked at the wound. It was raw and already puffy. He leaned and sniffed it, there was a faint stench, Joe took

Facts Show That Cubs' No Manager Plan Has Fared Much Better Than Experts Predicted

By MILTON RICHMAN

United Press International

They are not laughing so loud any more at Chicago's Wrigley Field, the "poor" misguiding multi-millionaire who was supposed to gum up the whole Chicago team.

Sure it's still early yet and a lot of things can happen between now and Oct. 1, but all those experts who predicted doom for the Cubs after Wrigley introduced his "no-manager plan" can chew some of these facts awhile.

The Cubs are only 14 games out of first place.

They have, in reliever Don Elston, the pitcher with the best record in the major leagues (4-0).

And in little Don Zimmer, they have suddenly discovered not only a long-sought "take charge" guy but also a long-ball threat with a newly found facility for breaking up extra-inning games.

Craft Takes Over
Zimmer did just that Wednesday, enabling new manager Harry Craft to break in with a victory after taking over for Vedic Hims in Wrigley's novel set-up of using one coach as a manager for a while and then another.

Zimmer picked on a three-and-two pitch with one out in the 10th inning and smashed it over the left field screen at Wrigley Field to beat the Cincinnati Reds, 3-2. Jim Maloney was the victim of Zimmer's wallop.

Only last Saturday, Zimmer brought the Cubs a 6-4 victory over the Phillies with an 11th inning homer.

Elston picked up his fourth straight victory when he took over for starter Glen Hobbie in the 10th and held the Reds hitless. Elston has appeared in five games so far and hasn't given up an earned run yet.

George D. Kent during questioning of Tanner.

Summer, attorney for Watson and an amateur photographer himself, immediately jumped up and demanded that the negatives be produced in court before the photos could be shown to the jury.

The photos were handed to Watson for examination. Mrs. Lassiter, sitting beside him turned her head away and daubed at her eyes with a pink tissue. Watson called the photos "gruesome."

Circuit Judge Joseph G. Rashid sustained Summer's objection and Tanner agreed to produce the negatives of the photos he took.

During Tuesday's session Mrs. Lassiter, a 39-year-old grandmother, burst into tears and shouted "it's not true!" when Kent told the jury she and Watson plotted Lassiter's murder on a "bed of adultery."

Two witnesses preceded Tanner to stand — Raymond Borrich, a construction worker who found the body, and Fred Birk, Wayne County Road Commission employee who reported the crime.

There were no disputes about their testimony. Borrich wasn't even cross examined while Birk was asked only two perfunctory questions.

Both Mrs. Lassiter and Watson have denied the state's contention that they hired three men to murder Lassiter. The three — Roy Hicks, Richard Jones and Charles Nash — are all serving life sentences for the slaying.

They pleaded guilty to second-degree murder but Nash and Jones have since asked for new trials. Judge Rashid, who sentenced them, is scheduled to hear motions in their case Friday.

Bray, Shelton to Present Recitals Tomorrow Night

Judith Bray, Paducah, and Philip Shelton, Princeton, will present their senior music recitals at 8 tomorrow evening in the recital hall of the Fine Arts Building.

Miss Bray will present a program composed of Haydn's Sonata in G Minor (Moderato), Intermezzo by Brahms, "Vogel Als Propriet" by Schumann, and Rachmaninoff's Prelude in B-Minor.

Shelton will perform Richard Strauss's "Concerto" three pastoral scenes ("A Mountain Serenade," "Evening Horizon," and "Way Down Yonder on a Hollow Log") will also be on file in the Place by George Frederick McKay, and Saint-Saens' "Morceau de Concert."

The recitals are part of the requirements for degrees in music.

Several special sessions have been added to the eight-week summer session at Murray State which will begin June 12.

For high-school teachers a summer science institute has been planned. Highly successful in previous years, the institute is designed to bring secondary-school science teachers up to date on recent developments in science and to offer new courses in the fields in which they teach.

A program jointly sponsored by the college and the National Science Foundation will be a science and mathematics training program for high-school students.

Another new program to start this summer is study beyond the master's degree. The program is designed by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education.

Workshops will be set up for advanced mechanics, a course for vocational agriculture teachers and other agriculture workers and for conservation in cooperation with the state department of conservation.

Dr. Robert Alsop will conduct a remedial reading clinic, which is also new for the summer session. Summer schedules for undergraduate courses are now available in the Administration Building. Murray will also have a short session, two-week term that will begin Aug. 7. Only one class, Education 0382, the techniques of teaching conservation, has as yet been arranged.

Others, however, will be scheduled during the summer. Those to be added will be largely determined by student demands. A student may take only one course during this short term. Short-session classes will meet from 9 a.m. until 12 noon.

Tombstones Go Modern Like Times

DYERSBURG, Tenn. (UP) — Tombstone styles, like everything else, keep changing.

"Things just aren't the same as when I first started working on markers back in 1914," said Clarence O. Parmenter, who entered his family's monument business when he was 16.

"Folks were a lot fussier about monuments back in those days," he said. "They demanded all kinds of fancy carving and ornamental work. A man had to be pretty much of an artist."

Today, he said, monuments are streamlined, with a few simple lines and little fancy work.

There are exceptions, though. A few years ago, a man drowned while fishing at Reelfoot Lake.

"He loved fishing so much his wife decided it would be nice to depict his hobby on the marker," Parmenter said. "Using three colors of granite, we reproduced an actual scene from Reelfoot Lake, including a man in a boat catching a fish."

Parmenter also has carved a shotgun on the monument for a hunter and the official emblem of the Illinois Central Railroad on the marker of a man who wanted it there to commemorate his 50 years with the line.

But the most significant change, Parmenter believes, is the trend to pick out a monument before death.

"I never will forget the first time my father sold a monument that way," Parmenter said. "An old couple, they were both in their 70's, came by and picked out their tombstone and told my father what they wanted on it."

"That was in 1908, and it really created a sensation."

"Many folks were so superstitious they said the couple would be punished for picking out their tombstone before their time to go."

"I guess they always figured they were right, too, because the wife died before my daddy could get the tombstone finished."

Often, markers contain only the name and the birth and death dates of the entombed. Sometimes, however, the departed one arranges to leave a final word to the world.

Parmenter particularly remembers this epitaph.

"Beware kind friends as you pass by."

Diane Baker and Dick Shawn star in "Wizard of Baghdad" in color at the Varsity Theatre Friday and Saturday. Co-hit is "7 Guns to Mesa".

Beirut College To Build A Campus With Round Look

BEIRUT (UPI) — The American-backed International College will take on a round look in the buildings on its new $6 million campus overlooking the sea near here.

American architect Edward D. Stone, who designed the school, unveiled the plans recently. Lebanese Prime Minister Saeb Salam, a graduate of the International College, called them "magnificent."

The college's principal, Thomas C. Schuller, said construction on the new campus was expected to begin early this summer and would take two or three years to complete.

The campus will occupy a rocky plateau overlooking the Mediterranean three miles south of this busy port city. Aside from the dramatic setting, what distinguishes the college plan is that all of its main buildings, including 16 for classrooms, a library, student union, auditorium and dormitories, are circular.

Stone's previous buildings include the drum-shaped American Pavilion at the 1958 Brussels World's Fair. Besides being round, the new International College buildings also will incorporate Stone's famed grill work. He used grills extensively in the Brussels pavilion, the American Embassy building in New Delhi and elsewhere.

Classroom buildings on the new campus will be arranged in an elliptical pattern. In the center will stand the library and administration building. A student activity building, including dining rooms, will stand along one side of the ellipse overlooking the sea.

An auditorium seating 765 will stand at one end of the circle. Stone pointed out a bell tower designed to set off the relatively flat buildings.

"I'm hoping someone will come along and perpetuate his name by paying for that," he said.

The new campus has been designed for 1,300 students in grades corresponding from the seventh grade to the freshman year of college in the American system.

Emphasis will be on teaching in English, but classes also will be taught in French and Arabic.

The International College was founded in 1891 at Izmir, Turkey

(then part of Greece). The Commonwealth of Massachusetts granted it a charter in 1903 "for the purpose of providing a thorough practical education for boys and young men."

The college, which still enrolls only boys, moved to Beirut in 1936. Its more than 1,600 students, including those in an elementary school which will not move to the new site, now share the campus of the American University of Beirut, States.

The present enrollment counts students from 34 countries, although the majority are from Lebanon and the neighboring Arab states of Jordan, United Arab Republic, Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

Nearly 85 per cent of the college's budget comes from tuition. The remainder is made up by private contributors in the United
